

CPP Investments' approach to sustainable investing

We're investing for the long term.

That means we need to look closely today...

at what will impact our investments in the decades to come.

Successful long-term investing is challenging...

And there are more factors to consider when deploying capital today than there were just a decade ago.

Taking on this challenge requires careful risk management and an eye for capturing promising opportunities.

When we, and the companies we invest in, consider sustainability...

We're more likely to generate the long-term returns the CPP Fund was designed to deliver.

That's why when making an investment we factor in sustainability from initial diligence until our point of exit

And why we invest in companies that appropriately assess and manage sustainability.

We have high expectations for ourselves and the companies we invest in.

With investments in over 50 countries and more than 300 global investment partners...

we engage with companies worldwide as they navigate their own unique sustainability-related risks and opportunities.

We share our knowledge and experiences as companies improve their own activities because ultimately, we believe incorporating sustainability will create value over the long term.

The CPP Fund is built to endure.

We know the Fund's performance will be shaped by how well we navigate the global economy's transition to net zero.

That's why we've committed our portfolio and operations to being net zero of greenhouse gas emissions by 2050.

We know that long-term investors need accurate, consistent data from companies to cut through the uncertainty...

Which is why we expect companies to follow standards from the International Sustainability Standards Board.

We also know that adapting to uncertainty means keeping our organization at the top of its game.

That's why we are strengthening our diversity by fostering an inclusive workplace where our colleagues can bring their whole selves to work.

Our people are up to the challenge of an ever-changing world.

They help us deliver on our mandate...

To invest and grow the Canada Pension Plan

For millions and millions of contributors and beneficiaries across Canada and every generation to come.

Learn more about our approach to sustainable investing at www.cppinvestments.com.